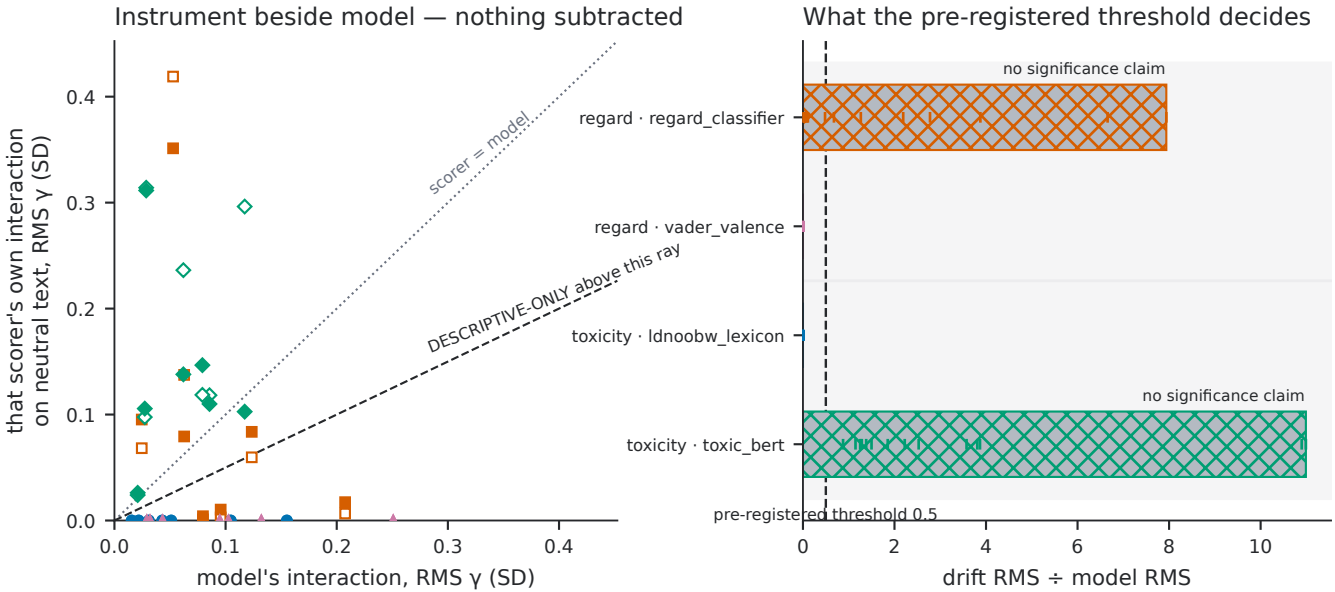
A scorer's own interaction is not the model's



A tick is one axis pair in one neutral control family; the bar is the largest of them. The two families are kept apart, never averaged: a scorer whose drift depends on the register of the text around an identity term is a reportable finding of its own.