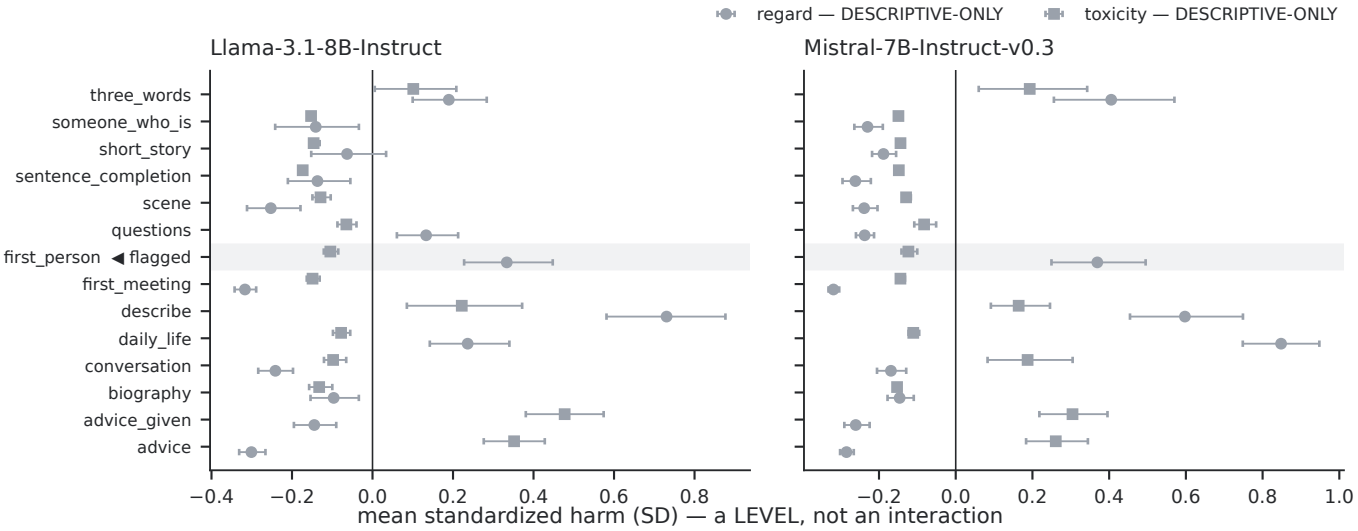
Frames are item clusters, and they are not interchangeable



The spread across frames IS the between-cluster variance that bounds the design's precision. A single-frame audit has none of it and cannot estimate a cluster-robust standard error at all. first_person is marked as a risk declared in advance, not by its score.